ENCUENTRO DE PENSAMIENTO Y PRAXIS: EL DERECHO EN LA RECONFIGURACIÓN DEL CAPITAL

ABOUT THE MEETING

The meeting is a biennial space that aims to analyze and understand modern capitalist law as a discourse of power whose mechanisms are in permanent reconfiguration with the social metabolism of capital.

While modern capitalist law is a discourse that has social effects, the dispute over its meaning, on the part of the working class, is a significant element of political tactics within the class struggle on a global level. Together with that conflict there is the dispute over the meaning that comes with the evocation of the "Law" by the indigenous and afro-descendant communities, who claim communal power as a form of social organization, exercise of autonomy and determination.

In this meeting, both senses of the discourse of law will be analyzed: as a hegemonic power and as a dispute; in order to explain and propose alternatives to the problems that afflict society as a whole in the economic dynamics and the political, racial and patriarchal domination to which capital subjects us in its various expressions.

We extend the invitation to this meeting that is an academic and political space under construction to think about social reality beyond its phenomenological representations and universal determinations, we invite you to think from our different historical and geographical realities from which our epistemologies are constituted.

Its organization is based on discussion groups divided by analysis axes in which dialogue and debate of ideas will be encouraged.

i. Dynamics of discussion groups:

The dynamic seeks to create bridges for dialogue between academics and social organizations in order that the joint analysis can lead to new and creative proposals for social transformation. With this we seek to enrich the dialogue between different epistemological perspectives, so that the central issue will be the collective discussion based on questions formulated for each axis. For this, the axis coordinators will collect the communications received in each discussion group and will share them among all the participants on the established dates. The participations received may consist of theoretical-methodological approaches and / or concrete experiences acquired from social organizations. At the end of the presentations there will be a space for collective debate on the topics addressed. After the meeting a deadline will be set for the delivery of the final works, which will be published in digital book format

The meeting will be divided into the two referred venues, one per week. Although the event is convened by different institutions, the activities are carried out in each city in a single space: Casa Galván and ICSA-UACJ, respectively, so that it is possible to broaden the dialogue between the participants, for this purpose open spaces are created with intermediate for coffee.
